

Tiny Vases Can Have an Outsize Effect on a Room—and Your Mood

Just add a flower or two.

By Monica Khemsurov

May 5, 2021, 12:23 AM PDT

From Bloomberg Businessweek | Subscribe | Reprints

LISTEN TO ARTICLE

SHARE THIS ARTICLE

Share

Tweet

Post

Email

1. PINK SATSUMA

In her new collection, Los Angeles ceramicist Raina Lee riffs on Californian midcentury pottery with pastel colors and a proprietary crackled glaze on the bottom half. \$90

2. POSTURE

After he used wire to suspend tulips in midair for a 2014 project, Swedish photographer Carl Kleiner was inspired to design the Posture series in collaboration with Italy's Bloc Studios. This one is made from white onyx. \$350

Seven bud vases to enhance any room—or mood. Photograph by Joanna McClure for Bloomberg Businessweek.

3. BLUE PIPE

The Yves Klein blue of this bud vase pairs easily with graphic blooms like this pink one, or bold purple daisies or orange poppies. \$40

4. WOOD BUD

Flowers sip from a small glass vial tucked inside this hand-turned maple container. Made in Oakland, Calif., from scraps left over from other projects, each vase is finished with mineral oil to highlight the wood's grain. \$60

5. VERSA

Picking which colored resin block faces the room can change the vibe of this vase, designed in Adelaide, Australia. Or match it with whatever you've chosen to put inside. \$120 \(\$93\)

6. EROS

This four-sided ceramic vase can hold a few blooms or just one that's as, um, unbending as the one here. The stem blends in with the container's deep green color so the flower can really pop. \$89

7. SOLO

It's not magic, just clever engineering. A hidden steel pin can help hold up a single flower, at least until its firm stem begins to droop. The extra-shallow pool of water keeps it bacteria-free, too. \$40

